May 10th, 2020 – this book is a collection of essays honoring the memory of Matthew W. Stirling, the grand man of Olmec archaeology who died in 1975. This book came out in 1981 and while there have been many wonderful advances in the study of the Olmecs and their predecessors, these essays and pictures present very well the state of scholarship at the time.

Santa Luisa: A major archaeological site with one of the longest culture chronologies in coastal Mexico dating from about 6000 BCE to the present covering a 6.2 square mile area of alluvial terraces between the modern towns of Gutiérrez Zamora and Tecolutla in the state of Veracruz. This significant ancient site along the Tecolutla river has extremely abundant cultural remains.
